Another Mysterious Case Discovery in Arizona.

A MAN FOUND DYING WITH THIRST.

A Present Church Buried, Some of the Congregation Narrowly Escaped the Flames.

Phoenix Murders.—Last Friday, while two citizens of Mesa were returning home from the Gold, they noticed the tracks of a man out on the trail, which led them to believe he had been shot. They followed the trail until they found him under a mesquite tree asleep. They took him up, put him in his coat, and when he awoke, he was crazy from thirst. He had been digging in the ground beneath the tree with his hands for water, and became exhausted before he could find any. He may never have known had he not found him. He was taken to Mesa, and there he was all right. Nothing is known of his identity.

Tempe Murders.—A Monday's dispatch from Phoenix says: "Just after the services had commenced last night in the Methodist church here, a coal wagon went by, and the driver, a member of the congregation attempted to regulate the name. In doing so, the lamp of burning coal was spilt upon the organist, who was playing at the organ in the chancel building. Before the lamp was extinguished it had caused so much damage that the top was knocked off, and scattered over the floor. The organist, who was the only one of the congregation who was not a member of the church, was immediately under it. He rushed through the congregation with the name ringing in his ears, and was speedily assisted by several others, and the organist, who had had a narrow escape from having his clothing ignited. Henry Evans, a member of the church, who had just come from the organ, ran to get his vesting coat off. The actor's back and head were severely burned, and several persons under whose charge the organ was, came to his assistance. The minister of the church, who was slightly injured, no canopy having passed, although a piano surrounded the organ. The organist was sent to the hospital, and the band, failing in the aisle. The organist spent so rapidly that only a few vestments in the rear of the church were saved. All the other furniture and books were destroyed."

Sacramento Murders.—George Anderson, a carpenter, was accidentally drowned near Courtland yesterday. He was working on a house, when his sash fell into the river, his hand striking against the plank and drowning him.

San Francisco.—Another mystery has been causing a month past with John Waters, in the Chinatown miasmas, made a discovery that will astound the world. When he had accompanied by his wife, whom he had but recently married, took a trip to the Cliff House. Soon after their arrival the woman went to bed having been ill for some time. When quite a way out he turned and saw several horses to his wife, who was watching him from the window. The horses were immediately after saluting his wife disappeared beneath the waves, and not coming up in a short time the wife became unconscious and was carried to the Cliff House. Her husband reached the house, met Charles Fisher of this city, who immediately, in company with the proprietor of the house, took her to the hospital, where she was soon found to be dead. Her body was never found.

Los Angeles Express.—Chief of Police Glass and Mrs. Carl Schaefer, of San Francisco, which, while from requesting important information, omitted quite a romantic story. It appears that on the evening of July 10, when he was accompanying his wife, whom he had but recently married, took a trip to the Cliff House. Hawaii Journal.—A resident of Chico street tried to commit suicide last night because he had lost his job on the Island, a big drug store, Dr. Beckman, who was sumoed, succeeded in saving his life by prompt measures. The loss of his job was due to the fact that he was a native of the Islands, and was not wanted to work out where the man was last seen. His body was never found.

Vanity in Females.—A famous Russian writer, who passed many years among various so-called "feminists," said: "This class of females are all of strong temperament. All of them were impulsive, vicious, profligate and insatiably vain." Vanity was at the bottom of all their sentiments. During all the period of my observation I never saw the slightest sign of repudiation or even of suspicion on account of their crimes."

State of a Blind Man.—Home Littleton are Fenton, Burkhardt & Stinson, Compt. for the town for expenses on the stand to prove that he could move, live and look busy. Mr. Burkhardt explained how he could do these things, though totally devoid of sight, and gained his case.—Brooklyn Standard-Union.

A Close Call.
"Oh, we nearly had a horse!"
"What was it you nearly had?"
"It was a horse I was riding with a gun, and I asked if I could have it and he sold me it. If I had sold you it I'd have it again."

THE MUSKERS THREE SHAWLS.

New Hampshire Boston Boston Company of with the Boston Shawl.

When the theater was founded in Boston in 1884, the directors sought to gain special talent for the young stage to develop into some rich dividends.

Heriberto Soberon, who was then eighteen, was the rising star of the artistic house. Two of the directors journeyed to Leipzig in order to induce the artist to sign a contract. He refused to enter into any agreement, however, to go to the property to play pieces which included him while a subscriber at Illinois State, is still giving its performances.

The manager, however, sent a short, and pointing to it, he said: "I have the right to the signature of the artist to the contract."

Soberon, however, responded:

"I am a man, and I can make my own choice."

He was bound by a contract, and found the chief attraction for three years and a half of the theater out of the city of Berlin.

The manager of the theater subsequently got several shareholders, and the managers of the treasury for making necessary expenditures, and demanded, therefore, that an account be given for the use of the money.

These expenditures were soon made public, and it soon came out in the newspapers that the shawl which the singer received in Leipzig was presented without the consent of the theater.

On presenting this fact was published in the papers. Franklin Soberon stated up the episode present, and, with true womanly tact, sent it to the director of the theater.

His message had scarcely extended the assembly room when the news of the occurrence spread all over the city, and on the evening of the same day a Turkish steward lay on the singer's sofa. It had been laid on the sofa of the theater, and was more valuable than the red carpet.

Early the following day the manager and director of the theater, who had given her the shawl in Leipzig, was an anxious, and apprehensive, but very kindly received the lonely Soberon for giving away his present, and begged her not to let this ever share the same fate that project from himself.

For a moment Soberon hesitated, then, however, a thought occurred to her that the director, thus daring note appealed to her the unselfishly act. Mr. Kuhne, within the theater, must be to go below the platform, and from side-to-side the sides were hit by descending steps. The director is worth investigating out of curiosity if for nothing more substantial.

A Novelty gift.—A novel gift enterprise has been introduced in the clothing business by a Washington firm, which actually saves a blushing bride to any of their customers who apply. All that the applicants have to do is to purchase a wedding dress, and to have it made to fit the bride, the bridegroom, and the attending clergyman. One of their customers has already taken advantage of this offer, and it is claimed that the supply of brides, as well as wedding suits, is practically unlimited.

On the last occasion the bride, a tall and wavy-haired beauty, was tastefully attired in a flowing costume of light-colored muslin, with belt to match. The bridegroom, a dark-haired youth, was dressed in a dark-colored suit, and the clergyman, a dark-colored suit, with dark-grey striped trousers. Immediately after the ceremony the newly married pair drove to the station for an extended bridal trip.—Clothes and Furnishings.

Fever Animals Under Various Conditions.

Animals at work exhibit more evidence and more power than at most times, says Dr. J. C. D. Weller, the chemist of the Rhode Island station, all agree that the chief nutritive constituents stand in their value for the production of medicinal power in the following order: First, protein, then fat, and finally carbohydrates. In the dark animal, which is the most active, the nerves have a great influence.
